

A Forest Within

You effortlessly gait the paved pathway
Admiring the untouched dozen-tree route.
My presence disturbs the trance you maintain—
Yet your gaze, alluringly resolute
With lashes thick and crescent as branches,
Reveals unseen spring pollen grains within.
Your jaw-line clenches, giving emphasis
To a faint beard complementing your grin.
My pupils dilate as I hold my gasp
With your face an inch away.

I inhale

Your intensifying musk as I cap
My eyes, doting on the grace of the taste.
I feel your curved lips and glimpse city lights
Sparkling your forest green eyes as you smile.
